

Ethan Lund, LHP, Oklahoma State

2026 Stats: 5.34 ERA/84.1 IP/1.411 WHIP/137 K/53 BB/2.58 K:BB

6-6, 210

Metrics

FB: 93.9/17.2 IVB/-6.1 HB/-4.98 VAA/6.7 ext/6.3 relH/36.7% zone/47.7 AA/53.8% usage/2470 rpm

CT: 86.4/0.6 IVB/5.4 HB/-7.27 VAA/41.1% zone/36.1 AA/16.1% usage/2710 rpm

CB: 83/-10.5 IVB/3 HB/-9.31 VAA/32.9% zone/48.6 AA/30.1% usage/2640 rpm

Write-up

A tall, big bodied lefty with a cross fire delivery, Lund was phenomenal when he got to 2 strikes in 2026. Unfortunately, he ran into walk trouble too many times and also allowed 11 homers. There is potential for a plus profile with a riding fastball and hard downer CB that pairs with a hard depth cutter but without a fourth pitch, he may struggle to keep hitters chasing long term. The build is a good reliever as a floor but figuring out a fourth offering in 2027 gives mid-rotation starter looks. The FB is the carrying pitch in the profile with plus ride and a hard angle into his glove side that he throws hard. He commands the ball into the upper half well and away to both sides. The problem is easy takes and heart misses. The pitch got plenty of whiff with a 29% whiff and 12% SWSTR but too many outings were plagued by big misses leading to walks. Further, the big ride shape allows a lot of fly balls which after a walk lead to XBH damage with runners on. Being able to be more competitive around the zone will bring what would already play in the pros. 45/50+ pitch

The CT is more of a gyro and gets a ton of depth from the high release and is incredibly steep. He throws it hard and excels at getting D/A from lefties. To RHH he left too many cutters up and over the plate. Progression back-footing and backdooring the pitch will raise its floor. The pitch also didn't generate many chases, likely because of the slight drop in arm angle Lund has when he throws the pitch. Finding a more consistent release point, even if it slightly diminishes movement will help its already plus shape play up. 50/55+ pitch

The CB is a hard downer with negligible gloveside. It is incredibly steep and generates a ton of swing and miss and chase with a whopping 51% whiff. He was able to land it on the top shelf to get CS and bury for whiffs as well. He showcased plus feel and really didn't miss too many up and arm-side. Unfortunately, some were hung and he allowed 3 homers on the pitch. 57 of his Ks were on the CB and he had an outstanding 39% putaway rate on the pitch. 55/60+ pitch